

This is in regards to the potential weakening of Indiana's telephone privacy act. I am totally opposed to any ruling that would make it possible for intruders to interrupt my precious family time. The evenings in my home are reserved for family meal time, working on homework, and generally spending time together bonding as a family unit. I view any kind of telemarketing as inconsiderate as someone stepping on my private property making unwanted solicitations. At least with my property I can post a sign and have these intruders legally removed. I should be able to have the same right with my telephone line coming into my home. The only recourse we citizens have for our phones is through the hard work of our attorney general's attempts to maintain our privacy through the Privacy Act. Please take this into consideration as you consider these banks desire to use their constitutional rights of free speech to intrude on my right to privacy. Thank you on behalf of the multitudes of Indiana residents who treasure our Privacy Act.

Sincerely,

Diana Mishler
